

Introduction

Anti-Slavery and Human Trafficking Policy

The Bakery Worldwide Group is committed to ensuring that Modern Slavery in all its forms (as described below), does not exist within its own business or from within its supply chain. Modern slavery is a crime and a violation of fundamental human rights.

In accordance with our Code of Conduct we have a zero-tolerance approach to Modern Slavery and we are committed to implementing effective systems and controls to avoid complicity in human rights violations related to our own operations, our supply chain and our products. We are committed to be transparent in our approach to tackling Modern Slavery, such that we are able to meet our obligations under the Modern Slavery Act 2015.

It is estimated, that 45.8 million human beings are subject to modern slavery globally. The countries with the highest proportion of their populations in slavery are North Korea, Uzbekistan, Cambodia, India, Qatar, Pakistan, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Sudan, Iraq, Afghanistan, Yemen, Syria, South Sudan, Somalia, Libya, Central African Republic, Mauritania, Haiti, Dominican Republic, Myanmar and Bangladesh. However, 58% of those living in slavery are in 5 countries: India, China, Pakistan, Bangladesh and Uzbekistan** (the "MS Territories").

Many international governments are taking action to seek to eradicate modern slavery through their national legislation and policies and there are, in addition to government action, increasing requirements on large companies to identify and address labour abuses in their supply chains. In 2015, the UK Government enacted The Modern Slavery Act 2015 (the "Act") in response to heightened concern around slavery, human trafficking and forced labour in global supply chains. The Act recognises the role that companies can play in tackling these crimes.

Whilst modern slavery takes many forms it refers to situations of exploitation, where a person cannot refuse or leave because of threats, violence, coercion, abuse of power or deception, for example their passport might be taken away if they are in a foreign country, they may experience or be threatened with violence or their family might be threatened.

Modern slavery is a criminal offence under the Act. It is defined under the Act as including several of the following forms:

- slavery,
- servitude,
- forced and compulsory labour and
- human trafficking ("Modern Slavery")

Each of these forms of slavery has the impact of a person depriving another of their personal freedoms, often to exploit them for personal or commercial gain.

Roles and Responsibilities

Scope of the Policy

Forms of Modern Slavery

The Board of Directors of The Bakery WorldWide Group Ltd and associated companies fully support and have overall responsibility for the effective operation of this Policy and for ensuring compliance with the Act.

The executive directors have day to day responsibility for implementing this Policy, monitoring its use and effectiveness, dealing with queries about it and auditing internal control systems and procedures to ensure they are effective in achieving the Policy objectives.

This Policy covers all the Company's employees, whether part-time, full-time, permanent or temporary as well as directors, officers, consultants, contractors, casual workers, agency employees and job applicants (collectively referred to as “Employees” in this Policy). Every individual in the Company has a personal responsibility to familiarise themselves with this Policy, to understand it and to act in accordance with its provisions.

Appropriate training will be provided as necessary in order to ensure individuals behave in a manner which shows a clear understanding of, and commitment to preventing and detecting Modern Slavery in our businesses, our partners and our supply chains.

Modern Slavery as defined under the Act is a term for the criminal activity for certain aspects of the abuse of human rights. It includes:

- Slavery – the fundamental element of slavery is the deprivation of freedom of a person by another or others.
- Servitude – the forced provision of services, activities or behaviours from one person by another through coercion. This often includes the perpetrator imposing on the victim the obligation for them to live at a particular address against their will/preference.
- Forced or Compulsory Labour – where a person (or persons) forces another to undertake work or provide services under the threat of the imposition of a penalty if they do not comply.
- Human Trafficking – where the perpetrator arranges travel for the victim with the intention of exploiting them. Often victims are so desperate to leave a location that they consent to the travel, without full comprehension as to the deception involved by the perpetrator.

Given the illegal nature of the above aspects of Modern Slavery, it is often difficult to identify as perpetrators are increasingly sophisticated and able to disguise their illicit activities. In addition, victims often live in fear of the perpetrators of these crimes and so do not speak up. Modern Slavery can even exist in the workplace and it is our responsibility to ensure that persons acting for or interacting with our businesses are not subject to any of the forms of modern slavery by:

- deploying preventative steps;
- ensuring that detection mechanisms exist;
- ensuring there is a culture of awareness; and
- by ensuring that opportunities exist for both victims and those concerned that modern slavery may be taking place, to speak up without fear of reprisal or employment disadvantage.
